HIS SPEECH AT ROCHESTER.

ROCHESTER, October 21 .- Governor eymour arrived here at five o'clock his afternoon, and was received by a

They went to the Osborn House, and at eight o'clock were escorted to the rink by a different position, and attempt to prelarge cavalcade and torchlight pro- vent the people of this country from ession. I can, therefore, speak to you to night but very briefly; but I shall be followed by these who more ably than myself can discuss the great issues of the campaign.

Nearly four years ago the war which ravaged our land ceased; nearly four years ago the affairs of this country were confided to the administration of the authorities. We found at the close of the great contest that a large section of our country had been disthe result of that war.

They come before the people of this country asking to be reinstated in power; they say that they have so controlled its interests that they are entitled to the confidence of the people; they claim that their measures have been wise and judicious, and that they have tended to advance the interest and welfare of the Republic. In their Convention they congratulated the people upon the success of their schemes of reconstruction. The question now presented to the voters of this country is simply this: Are you satisfied with the conduct of those who have conducted the affairs of the country? [Cries of "No, no," and cheers.] Are they entitled to your confidence? [Cries of "No, no."] Have they so administered your finances that your taxes have been lightened, as they might have been? Crice of "No, no," Have they relieved the labor of the country from the great burdens which rested upon it? |Cries of "No, no." | Can the business men of the country, who conduct its capital, say that they repose such confidence in the wisdom of those who now administer its affairs, and that if they shall again be placed in power, can they go on in confidence in their transactions? [Cries "No!" No!" and cheers ..] The answer of this great audience, and I believe the answer of the people of this country, will be "No:" The day was when the American people were proudwhen they were counted among the foremost nations of the earth as a people largely engaged in the commerce of the world.
